American Update

We have had an amazing response to our Special Events this year. The Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade™ is at capacity. Our other events have just a few spots left but have extended the deadlines until they are full. These include: the Capital One Bowl, London New Years Parade, and the SMU Football Extravaganza. Visit our Special Events page for registration information.

We launched our 2013 Contest Registration yesterday and have been flooded with teams wanting to register early to get the special 10% discount on entry fees. For more information on our 2013 Competitions, visit our web site.

Inspiration of the Week

Me First

By John C. Maxwell The 17 Indisputable Laws of Teamwork

People always project on the outside how they feel on the inside. Have you ever interacted with someone for the first time and suspected that their attitude was poor, yet you were unable to put your finger on exactly what was wrong? Here are six common attitudes that ruin a team so that you can recognize them for what they are when you see them.

- An inability to admit wrongdoing
- Failing to forgive
- Petty jealousy
- The disease of Me
- A critical spirit
- A desire to hog all the credit

Certainly this isn't every bad attitude—just the most common ones. Simply put, most bad attitudes are the result of selfishness. If one of your teammates puts others down, sabotages teamwork, or makes themselves out to be more important than the team, then you can be sure that you've encountered someone with a bad attitude.
